INCHING TOWARD A PHD

Pursuing an advanced degree costs in many ways, as Catherine is well aware. Yet a passion for good journalism drives her. Working in Nairobi, Kenya as a Radio/TV manager, lets Catherine use her communication skills for church work. She has worked in her field for nearly 20 years. Yet she wants to do more; she wants to teach communication studies to church workers.

Study...Work...Study

No university in Kenya, her home country, currently offers a PhD in professional practice, but a school in United Kingdom does. Since tuition is much more than Catherine and her family can afford, she's at school for three months, and then back home in Nairobi to work and save for another three months of university.

However, with your help, one day Catherine will return to the classroom, not as a student but as the teacher—Dr. Catherine Nyameino.

CHALLENGES, GOALS AND SUCCESS

challenges. A good student, she is active in Sabbath programs and with Women's Ministries. She needs our help.

Their Challenges and Ours

Many talented women around the globe face similar challenges. "Scholarshipping Our Sisters" [SOS] wants to help them meet their goals. But SOS has a challenge too. This year the goal is $50,000. By October 30, only $33,055 had been raised. We need to raise $17,000 more.

How can I help?

Take a minute to answer this important question. "How can I help SOS meet this goal?" Could you let your family know that this Christmas you'd rather have a donation for Women's Scholarships than another sweater or fuzzy robe? Could you give in memory of your dad or grandma?

Raising $17,000 is the challenge for SOS, to help Karina—and all the others.

Inspiring Donors

By Carolyn Kujawa, Volunteer Coordinator for SOS

You are inspiring—as you help our sisters around the globe attend college. Here are stories of just two of the wonderful donors who inspire us.

Found Money

“We needed to replace our old refrigerator though it would squeeze our finances,” a friend told me. “After praying about it, we found one we liked. My husband and I agreed we could afford it with careful budgeting, but did not buy it that day. A few days later, we found the same make and model for $270 less. Happy for the savings, we paid for it and arranged for delivery. On the way home, my husband said, ‘That $270 is not ours. It is Found Money. God helped us find the better price. That will be our gift for Women’s Scholarships’.” Found money—what a wonderful idea!

Better than Toasters

If you are getting married after both you and he have had your own homes for several years, it’s likely you don’t need more toasters, bath towels, or chafing dishes. A friend of SOS, who is planning her wedding, is sure of this. But her wedding guests still insist that they “want to do something” even though she assures them they don’t have to. So she is providing information about the women’s scholarship program and the tremendous impact it has on women and their families, inviting her friends to make a gift in her honor.

What a blessing for SOS and the women’s scholarship program to have such wonderful friends. What an inspiration! Thanks to all of you. You inspire us.

Becoming a Christian Counselor

Ariuntungalag was one of the first Adventist church members in Northern Mongolia. “When I came to church, there were many members with problems,” Ariunaa recalls. Her pastor said his ministry was not enough; they needed a Christian counselor.

It Wasn't Possible

“I was willing to study this area, but in Mongolia it wasn’t possible.” After University in Mongolia, she enrolled in the Counseling Masters’ program at SahnYook University in Seoul.

An Involved Student

Affectionately called Ariunna, she’s known as a hardworking, dedicated member. At University in Mongolia, she won academic awards every year. Her grades now are just as strong. She also participates in Women’s Ministries, the school board, and research.

Tuition but not Food

Although she has a scholarship for tuition, her student visa prevents her getting a job, so paying for housing and food is difficult.

Your gift will help women such as Airunaa prepare to serve—in Mongolia, Argentina, France or many other countries.
